Influences of the development of modern technologies on the development of modern photography

Photography in the modern world is the art of self-expression, communication and creating history. Since 1839, photography was officially established, which went through various stages of development, at first only family portraits were produced, then photography went to the street, which laid the foundation for street photography, architectural and landscape photography, gradually began to develop other directions.

Changes in the world affect human thinking, including photographers. Over time, new discoveries and new directions appear in photography, and photographic thinking and creativity expand.

The greatest contribution to the development of modern photography was made by the development of the camera industry. Modern cameras have limitless possibilities that allow us to capture the special moments in our lives in a higher quality than before.

The great contribution of the International Organization for Standardization to the development of photo cameras is important. The ISO 12232 standard was developed in this organization, which was updated in 2019 and adapted to modern challenges as much as possible. With the help of the Iso 12232.2019 standard, cameras are better able to capture sharper and low-light sensitive images, allowing us to take perfect photos at night.

In the early period, only portraits were taken, and in modern photography, there are abundant works that reflect the political and social problems of the modern world, starting with household items and minor details, ending with portraits of unknown and familiar people. No matter how different the genre is for photographs, one thing is common, the world seen and created by the photographer as it really is .

Recently, smartphone cameras have developed alongside professional cameras, and they can take pictures of no less quality than professional cameras.

The main goal of modern photography is to overcome time and space through modern technologies, to create impressive photos from everyday and everyday scenes, to find new ways and to present photographic works in a different form.

In modern photography, it has become especially important to open photo schools, where different genres of photography and the functions of cameras are studied. Documentary photography has been given great importance recently, which has become more relevant due to the current processes in the world. Documentary photography reflects today's life, modern world and man in this world. Along with documentary photography, photo schools teach commercial and advertising photography, the absence of which is unthinkable in modern life. Social media, especially Instagram, has made a great contribution to the development and popularization of modern photography. Instagram allows you to create your own world, your community, record your thoughts and views on the moments that interest you, and become famous beyond geographical boundaries. Instagram gives you the opportunity to improve and refine your skills, opens new doors in photography, allows you to showcase your aspirations. Instagram and similar platforms give you the motivation to stand out.

The development of modern photographic art is promoted by exhibitions of monochrome and color photographs and the publication of photo-illustrated magazines in various countries and cities.
